May 2021 elections: publication of supplementary guidance

Further to our last update in Bulletin 285, we have now published the fourth in our planned series of supplementary guidance to support electoral administrators with preparing for and delivering the May 2021 elections against the backdrop of the coronavirus pandemic. This document focuses on managing polling stations.

The guidance, which has been developed with the expert advice of our national public health bodies, and in consultation with the Wales Electoral Coordination Board (WECB), Wales Electoral Practitioners Working Group (WEPWG), Elections, Referendums and Registration Working Group (ERRWG), AEA, Solace, Cabinet Office and Welsh Government, supplements the core guidance for EROs and ROs by highlighting the additional challenges that you may face during the continuing public health situation to deliver polling station voting safely and effectively.

It is intended to be read alongside Part C of our core guidance for Returning Officers. Further detailed guidance on the processes to be followed within polling stations on polling day itself will follow with the publication in early 2021 of updated versions of the polling station handbook, and this will also be reflected in updated template polling station staff briefing presentations.

As we have set out previously, the supplementary guidance documents will be living documents in recognition of the changing landscape and ongoing developments in public health advice and legislation affecting the polls. We will update them as and when there is additional information to add, and highlight when any changes are made through the EA Bulletin.

As always, if you have any questions or concerns, please do contact infowales@electoralcommission.org.uk and we will be happy to help.
